I think Nicole is saying what I'm saying, only phrases it much better.

Basically I would really like to see if the team is capable of delivering something: Even being able to hire a good engineer is NOT trivial, and if they can show you a demo of the app I would be much more impressed.

· The technology appears to have a competitive advantage but you are in a far better position to judge this

· In terms of looking at the financing, projections and operational rollout, I think there are some issues. In short my opinion is that the revenue projections seem somewhat ambitious in terms of timing and the cost side appears too low to me.They need support on the business side.

· The imminent pilot projects are clearly crucial to the company and as a consequence my suggestion would be to defer or at the very least limit funding until there is further evidence on proof of concept post these initial pilots as well as some of the other items I have flagged.

Hope this feedback is of help to you.

I look forward to getting your revised detailed business plan, which may well reshape these initial thoughts.
